PRESENTER BIOGRAPHIES

Dr. Jason DeJong is a Professor at the University of California, Davis, and the Director of the Center for Geotechnical Modeling. Prof. DeJong's technical contributions have primarily been in the areas soil and site characterization, earthquake engineering, biogeotechnics, and geotechnical sustainability. Jason has developed or refined several in situ, laboratory, and modeling tools as well as data quality and correction methods, to improve the characterization of difficult soils – soft sediments, intermediate soils, tailings, and gravelly soils. Jason is actively engaged with industry in implementing research advancements into practice and serving as a technical reviewer.

David A. Gagne is the President and CEO of Agile Frameworks and leads its flagship project, MetaField, a single application, end-to-end cloud-based solution that delivers accurate, real-time information. The MetaField platform seamlessly connects field, lab, and office workflows for geotechnical engineering, construction materials testing. The proprietary software is now AI enhanced allowing further efficiencies for firms as it rapidly manages project specifications and schedules while facilitating dispatching, testing, and collecting data and assembling results. Prior to his current position, David served as CEO of Nagios Enterprises and MedHub LLC.

David D. Harwood, PE, is Senior VP and Director of Business Transformation at Terracon Consultants and a member of its Board of Directors. With over 25 years in geotechnical and infrastructure engineering, David now addresses how data, process, and technology reshape engineering delivery at enterprise scale. His work spans data governance, standardized technical workflows, AI-assisted reporting solutions, automated engineering calculations, and client-facing self-service platforms. He recently completed the University of Michigan Ross Business School Executive Education Chief Data & AI Officer program where he concentrated on applied AI strategy, operating models, and change management in complex, risk aware organizations.

Wichert Kooloos is VP of Revenue at VIKTOR, where he leads go-to-market strategy for a platform enabling engineers to build and deploy applications at scale. With a background in offshore wind engineering and as a former founder of a wind turbine inspection company, he brings a practical understanding of operating in safety-critical, risk-averse environments. His work focuses on how AI, particularly large language models, can be safely integrated into engineering workflows. Wichert explores how organizations can balance speed and innovation with control, reliability, and accountability when deploying AI-generated applications on complex, high-stakes projects.

Jamie P. Barr, LEP, is a Principal/Vice President and Geological Engineer at Langan with more than 25 years of diversified consulting experience throughout North America. Since 2022, he has worked with others at Langan to evaluate and integrate AI into Langan's overall business practices and strategies. He is a Licensed Environmental Professional (LEP) and manages Langan's environmental practices in Connecticut and Massachusetts. Well versed in numerous engineering disciplines, his main areas of focus include brownfield redevelopment, portfolio due diligence, site assessment/remediation, and developing rapid closure strategies and engineering workflows.

Brian Stromquist, AIA, is a Strategy Director at Gensler who works with leading technology companies to align their environments with future ways of working. With a background in design and strategy, Brian brings a research-driven approach to shaping workplaces that support innovation, collaboration, and organizational performance. A featured speaker at industry-leading events including the AIA Conference on Architecture, the CoreNet Global Summit, the Metropolis Think Tank series, WORKTECH, and NeoCon, where he shares insights on the evolving relationship between workplace, culture, and technology. His work and perspectives have been published in The Wall Street Journal, Fast Company, and Forbes.

Shawn Weedon, PE, GE, lives in San Diego where he is the current CEO of Geocon Incorporated – a 55-year old company operating in the State of California with 11 offices. He grew up in the Ventura/Ojai area, attended the University of Arizona then moved back to Southern California to begin his career in geotechnical engineering. His experience encompasses a wide range of projects across the public and private sectors. When he is not focusing his time on running Geocon, he is enjoying his time with his family (wife and two daughters) including torturing them with geologic/geotechnical discussions, playing softball, traveling and attending car shows.

Ron Skaggs, PE, GE, served as Principal Engineer and Vice President of Engineering at Condor Earth, an employee-owned geotechnical and environmental consulting firm with multiple Northern California offices. His career spanned geotechnical design and construction projects, construction management, construction quality control, waste characterization and containment design, storm water BMP systems, groundwater recovery systems, and pavement rehabilitation using full depth reclamation (FDR) pavement recycling. He will share about his experiences navigating litigation and business threats to encourage industry leaders to seek out resources for mental health and other personal support.

Bryan Hixson is a leading neuroscience expert in quantitative EEG brain mapping, neurocognitive testing, neurofeedback brain training, and nutritional cellular health. He is a brain health expert consultant for AARP's Staying Sharp platform, serving 38 million members. The founder and director of the Brain Performance Centers of Southern California, his companies have served multiple professional and collegiate sports organizations, the U.S. Army, the Department of Defense, and over 1,000 Olympians and elite athletes. He co-founded BrainSpan Laboratories, which provides a clinically validated test used by nearly 1,000 doctors nationwide to optimize brain health and lower dementia risk.

Seana Fippin co-founded Red Box Business Solutions, a concierge level managed SMART IT provider and cybersecurity firm, which exceeds firms' technology needs in a rapidly advancing market. Seana began her career in management at the leading ISP and global web hosting company, Verio, in the Silicon Valley. There she gained experience hiring and managing teams of technicians and growing a technical support department from the ground up. She went on to found WebZonkey, TechConsult and S&S Communications. Her people-first approach has guided her to community and economic development efforts, serving as the Planning Commissioner for the City of Brentwood and as President of the Rotary Club of Brentwood.
